

A Dog Walks into the Room

Two little boys were playing in the front room of their small house. There was no air-conditioning to bring relief from the summer heat so the front door was open for the air.

In walked a dog.

One of the boys screamed in terror and shut himself in the front closet — crying and scared.

The other little boy's eyes went wide with wonder and curiosity and he found himself enchanted by the deep wells of liquid color in the dog's eyes. He petted the dog and tried to get on its back and ride it like a pony.

So here's the question:

How many dogs walked into the room?
